

Google scholar User Guide

What is Google Scholar?

Google Scholar is a web search engine produced by Google that allows researchers to search across many disciplines and sources, such as articles, theses, books, abstracts, professional societies, online repositories, universities, and other websites. It provides a convenient way to search all scholarly literature from one place.

Importance of Google Scholar:

- Explore related works, citations, authors, and publications
- Keep up with recent developments in any area of research
- Check who's citing your publications and create a public author profile
- Locate the complete document through your library or on the web
- Email alerts allow researchers to stay updated about who is citing their own articles
- Calculating the H-index of a researcher

Steps to create and manage a Google scholar account:

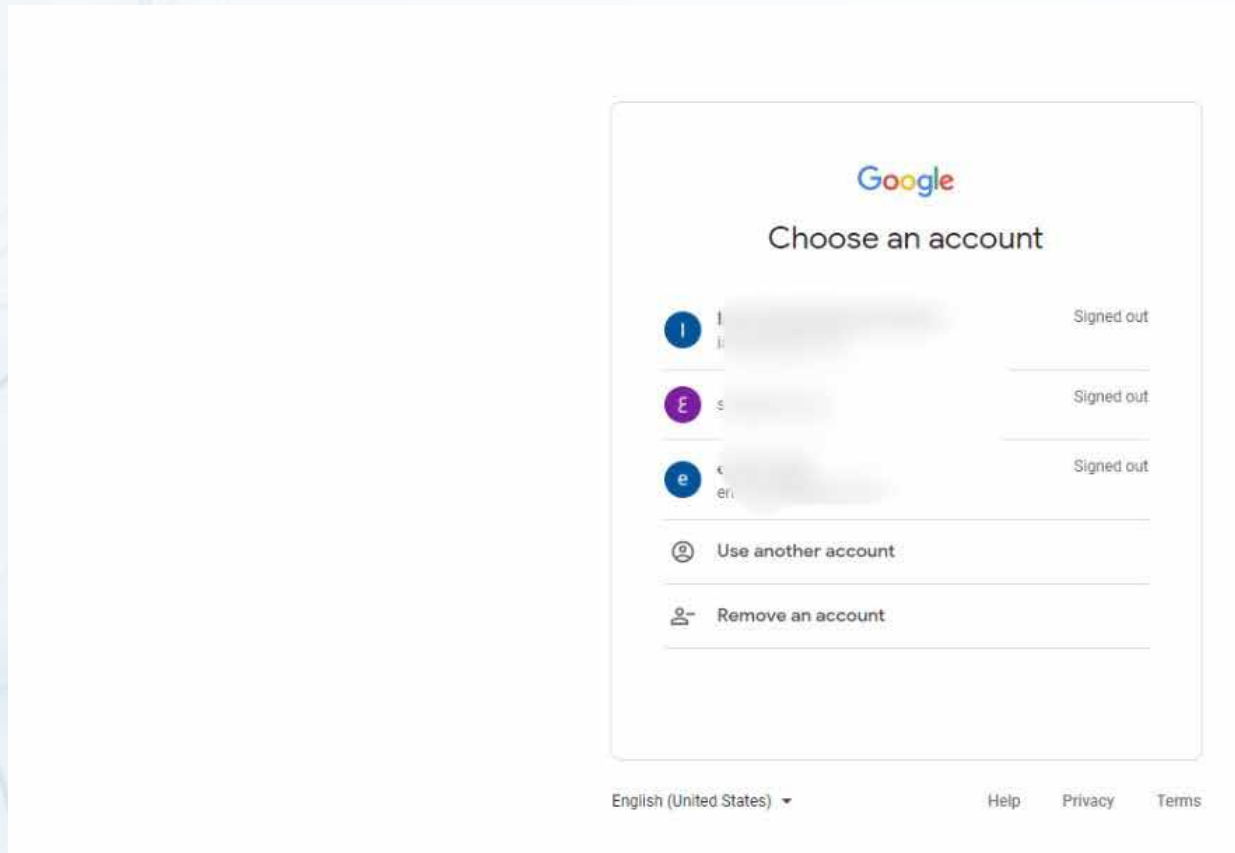

log in to google scholar website by scanning the barcode

Click on the login icon

Log in using a university email or another email registered with Gmail.
If there is more than one account registered in Gmail, the required account should be selected

Enter password

The image shows a screenshot of the Google account password entry interface. At the top, the Google logo is visible. Below it, the text "Enter your password" is displayed above a password input field. A red arrow points from the left towards this input field. Below the input field, there is a checkbox labeled "Show password". At the bottom left, there is a link for "Forgot password?". At the bottom right, there is a blue "Next" button. The footer of the page includes the text "English (United States)" with a dropdown arrow, and links for "Help", "Privacy", and "Terms".

Complete personal information (researcher's name as written in articles, academic degree, department, and faculty, university email, research interests, link of faculty member's page on the university's website)

The screenshot shows a web interface for creating a profile. On the left is a sidebar with three items: '1 Profile' (highlighted with a blue circle), '2 Articles', and '3 Settings'. The main content area is titled 'Track citations to your articles. Appear in Scholar.' and shows the email 'emansaa38@gmail.com' with a 'Switch account' link. Below this are several input fields: 'Name' (with a subtext 'Full name as it appears on your articles'), '+ Add another name', 'Affiliation' (with a subtext 'E.g., Professor of Physics, Princeton University'), 'Email for verification' (with a subtext 'E.g., einstein@princeton.edu'), 'Areas of interest' (with a subtext 'E.g., general relativity, unified field theory'), and 'Homepage (optional)' (with a subtext 'E.g., http://www.princeton.edu/~einstein'). A blue 'NEXT' button is at the bottom left of the form area.

Select ways to update your articles and profile visibility

The screenshot shows the Google Scholar settings interface. At the top, there is a header with the Google Scholar logo and a user profile icon. On the left, a sidebar contains three menu items: 'Profile', 'Articles', and 'Settings', each with a checkmark and a number '3' next to it. The main content area is titled 'Article updates' and 'Profile visibility'. Under 'Article updates', there is a description: 'Scholar automatically finds your new articles and changes to existing articles.' Below this, there are two radio button options: 'Apply updates automatically' (selected) and 'Email me updates for review'. Under 'Profile visibility', there is a description: 'Public profiles help your peers find and follow your work.' Below this, there is a checkbox option: 'Make my profile public'. At the bottom, there is a section titled 'Follow by email (requires public profile)' with two radio button options: 'New articles related to my research' and 'New citations to my articles'. A 'Done' button is located at the bottom of the settings area.

After completing your profile, you will be moved to the researcher's home page

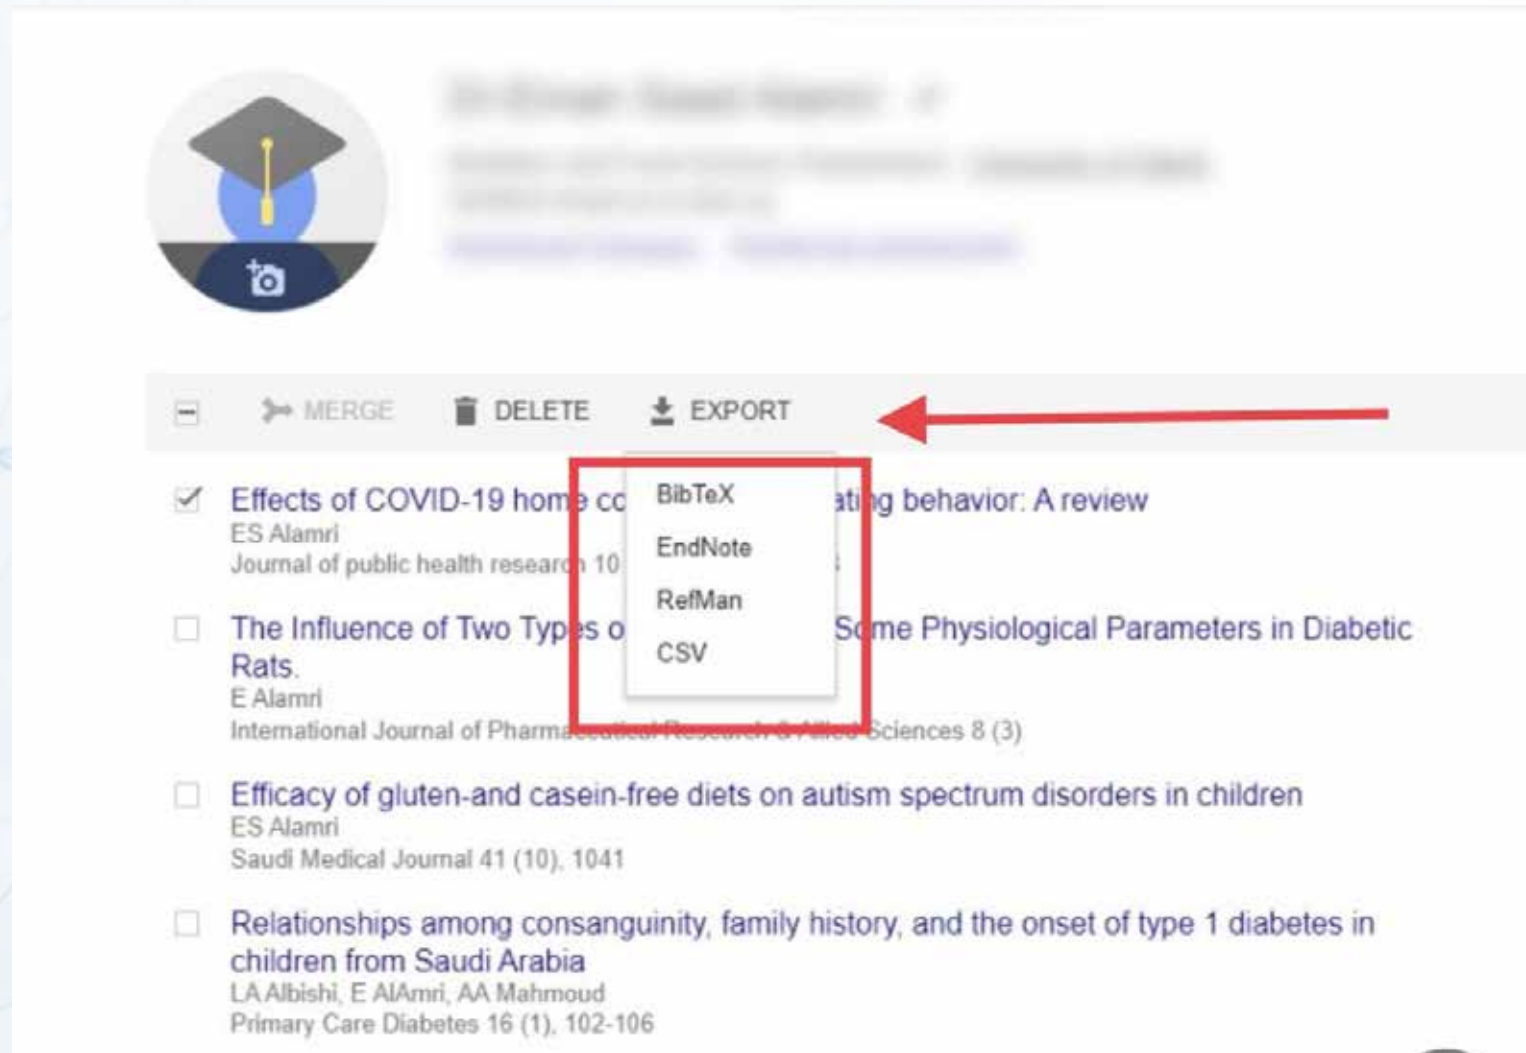

The homepage is divided into several sections, such as researcher's articles and total number of citations per article

This section shows the total number of citations for your research per year, as well as H-index, and i10-index

By clicking the box next to the article, it can be exported in a number of popular formats.

If any articles are not added automatically, you can add them manually by clicking on the “Add” button

There are three ways to add research manually:

The first way: by adding a group of articles at once, suggested by Google Scholar based on the author’s name matching your name, adding individual articles suggested by Scholar, or adding the publication manually.

The screenshot displays a web application for managing research articles. At the top, there is a user profile section with a circular avatar containing a graduation cap icon, a name, and a 'FOLLOW' button. Below this is a table of articles. A context menu is open over the first article, showing options: 'Add article groups', 'Add articles', 'Add article manually', and 'Configure article updates'. A red arrow points from the 'Add article groups' option to the first article in the table.

The second way: is to add individual articles that the scholar also suggests to you

The screenshot displays a research profile interface. At the top, there is a profile picture of a graduation cap, a name, and a 'FOLLOW' button. Below this is a table of articles. A context menu is open over the first article, with a red arrow pointing to the 'Add articles' option.
