

The acquisition of knowledge, skills and scientific, practical and research expertise in his/her field of specialization to enable him/her to pursue a successful career and compete in the local and global labor market.

The ability to assess contemporary problems and issues logically and from different perspectives to propose innovative solutions that contribute to the advancement of society and human civilization.

The ability to distinguish between authentic righteousness in contrast to the corrupt and false belief that might be intruded on his/her religious culture, history, and national heritage, based on sound scientific methods, and strong basis of knowledge.

The acquisition of the required ethics and behaviors that help him/her to keep pace with changing cultural and social challenges, and to deal honestly, fairly, and professionally with himself/herself, with the other, and with society as a whole.

The ability to receive, transmit, and express ideas and information effectively and in different ways while adhering to the rules of correct language and structure and through different channels of communication.

Participating efficiently and professionally in community-based activities such as volunteering and collaborative work in response to his/her sense of community responsibility and national affiliation.

The ability to exercise discipline and perform professional duties competently in such a manner that reflects the skills of teamwork, time management, self-development, flexibility and adaptation to the work environment.

The assumption of the roles and responsibilities of leadership and interaction with others to achieve the common goals of a professional society.

The ability to use modern technology ethically, safely, and effectively for scientific, practical, research and life purposes.