

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)

1. What programs are offered by the Faculty of Pharmacy?

The Faculty of Pharmacy offers the Doctor of Pharmacy (PharmD) program, designed to prepare graduates for professional pharmacy practice and related fields.

2. Is the program accredited?

Yes, the PharmD program follows national academic and professional accreditation standards approved by the NCAAA.

3. What is the language of instruction?

The primary language of instruction is English.

4. Does the Faculty accept transfer students?

Yes, transfer requests are considered according to university regulations and subject to seat availability and course equivalency.

5. How long is the PharmD program?

The program typically takes six academic years, including one year of internship (experiential training).

6. Does the program include practical training?

Yes, the curriculum includes laboratory courses, clinical training, and structured experiential education in healthcare settings.

7. Is a graduation project or research required?

Yes, students are required to complete a research or capstone project as part of the program.

8. Where do students complete their internship year?

Internships are conducted at accredited hospitals, community pharmacies, pharmaceutical companies, and healthcare institutions.

9. Is the internship mandatory?

Yes, successful completion of the internship year is required for graduation.

10. What facilities are available at the Faculty of Pharmacy?

The Faculty provides modern teaching laboratories, research labs, simulation facilities, computer labs, and access to electronic resources.

11. Are academic advising services available?

Yes, each student is assigned an academic advisor to support academic planning and progression.

12. Does the Faculty support research activities?

Yes, students and faculty are encouraged to participate in research projects, conferences, and scientific publications.

13. What career opportunities are available for graduates?

Graduates can work in hospitals, community pharmacies, pharmaceutical industries, regulatory bodies, academia, and research institutions.

14. Can graduates pursue postgraduate studies?

Yes, graduates may pursue MSc, PhD, residency programs, or specialized professional training.